

Ethnic linguistic minorities in Italy

The Italian linguistic landscape includes the national language (Italian), dialects, and a number of “minority languages” – or languages of linguistic minorities – of different families. The most ancient groups of languages – called “historic” linguistic minorities – come from the Romance, Germanic, Slavic, Greek, Albanian families and are spoken by autochthonous communities.

